WILSON HOPEFUL AS "BIG FOUR" RESUME WORK

RUSSIAN PROPOSITION COMING TO PEACE DELEGATES OCCUPYING A GREAT PART OF THEIR INTEREST

BRAND NEW AMENDMENT PLANNED

By Carl D. Groat
(United Press Staff Correspondent)

PARIS, April 2—When the "big four" resumed its session today President Wilson was represented as hopeful that the peace work would be greatly speeded up.

The President's plain speech to his colleagues late Monday was believed to have resulted in clarifying the situation.

The "big four" yesterday afternoon continued their discussion on reparation. The economic blockade in Poland and Esthonia was also discussed.

By Lowell Mellett
(United Press Staff Correspondent)

PARIS, April 2—There is now before the peace conference a definate and concise proposition from the Russian government that cessation of hostilities depends upon Premier Lenine. There is also authoritative information that Carl Kautsky, German radical, is now in Moscow trying to arrange a formal alliance between Germany and Russia. In the light of these two facts the peace delegates are giving more thought to the Russian situation than the daily official communiques indicate.

By Fred S. Ferguson
(United Press Staff Correspondent)

PARIS, April 2—An effort is being made, it was learned today, to insert an amendment in the peace treaty for exacting reparation from Germany, naming a separate amount. This amount would thereby give the amount Germany must pay.

TODAY'S DISPATCHES SHOW GERMAN LABOR DISTURBANCES ON INCREASE

By Frank J. Taylor
(United Press Staff Correspondent)

BERLIN, (Delayed)—Several strikes today are spreading [illegible]. Clashes have occurred between workmen and troops in various cities and resulted in casualties. Indications are growing that the uprisings are inspired by the Spartacans who are believed to be employing these disturbances to weaken the government preparatory to beginning a third revolution. The government has proclaimed a state of siege in the whole of the Rhineland defying the 50,000 miners who are on strike. The situation in that region endangers food shipment and the coal supply and may even effect payments to the Allies for maintenance of the armies of occupation.

Release of Herr Daumig, radical leader, charged with starting the Spartacan uprising has temporarily allayed the general strike in Berlin. The metal workers however, are threatening to walk out on their own initiative.

Riots have occurred in Frankfurt and several food shops were stormed. Three persons were killed and many wounded by rifle and machine gun fire. The mob then attacked the police station and a number of hotels. A sailor was dragged from the station and lynched. His body was thrown into the river. Government troops have control of the city. Many persons were killed and wounded in the fighting with soldiers in Castrop near Bochum.

Wurtemburg has joined the general strike. At Studdgart the bourgeoisie have started a counter strike completely paralyzing the city's industries.

FEDERAL ARSENAL AT PITTSBURG IS OBJECT OF REDS

PITTSBURGH, April 2—Police and detectives were rushed to the U. S. Arsenal at 40th and Butler streets here this afternoon in response to a riot call. Army officiers reported that several men were attempting to gain entrance to the government's plant. Army officers at the arsenal said that four men who attempted to open the arsenal gates had escaped in an automobile before the police arrived. Shortly after noon today army authorities were notified by telephone that a suspicious looking man was trying to pry the arsenal gates. Lieut. J. S. Buckley was assigned to investigate outside the arsenal. Lieut. Buckley saw four men, apparently aliens loitering in the shade. He summoned Lieut. Robert Short and started toward the men who fled. After chasing them several blocks the men boarded an automobile which had been waiting for them at the 43rd street bridge and speed away. Police reserves rushed to the scene were stationed outside the arsenal. The uniformed guard was also increased.

Vigilance on the part of secret service men is responsible for the arrest yesterday of Jan Wycisa, a Russian revolutionist, who is a representative of Trotsky. A secret service operator joined the Bolsheviki organization at Pittsburg, learned of the schemes to wreck the arsenal and nipped it in the bud by the prompt arrest of Wycisa. The arrest was made by Deputy U. S. Marshal Ira C. McCloskey of this city.

HE IS NOT GUILTY

John Variot, of Frenchville, transaced business in Clearfield yesterday. He called at The Progress office with hay on his horns regarding "Uncle Peter's Dream," which appeared in this paper last week upon the day in which Mr. Variot was in town on a previous visit. Some of his neighbors charged him with being responsible for its publication and he wanted us to set him right in the matter. We cheerfully do so, by stating that the article, which was supposed to apply to road conditions in Cevington township, was not written or suggested by Mr. Variot, who had no knowledge of it whatever ever until it appared in the paper.

COAL PRODUCERS MEETING IS POSTPONED

The special meeting of The Central Pennsylvania Coal Producers' association called for April 3d, to vote on the Proposed Plan of Cooperation between the United States government and the Coal Mining Industry, has been postponed due to the postponement of the National Coal meeting on April 4th at Cleveland.

The National Coal association postponed its Cleveland meeting because the price fixing board of the department of commerce has submiteed a counter plan which is held in temporary abeyance, due to the lack of agreement between Chairman Peek of the price fixing board and Director General ines of the United States Railroad Administration.

THE WORM SOON TURNED

Bill Wrigley, of the Elecric Supply Co. made a quick trip to the Clearfield Hospital last evening to render first aid to the electric lighting system, which had been reported to him by telephone as being out of business. On arrival and announcing his business Bill was informed a mistake must have been made as all the lights were nicely trimmed and burning.

Bill took the matter up with the telephone girl and on referring to the number from which the call was recived found it was Bud Lee's phone. April first wsa not yet in the discard.

Maynard Shaw is home from Fort Sam Houston, Texas, having been mustered out of the service.

PROGRESSIVE FIRE ON THE BOWERY

A horse and wagon on fire is a rare sight these days of auto spoding but "Bowery" habitues were treated to such an exhibition about 2 o'clock this afternoon. Isaac Poole, of Paradise loaded his Dearborn wagon with ashes from the Windsor Hotel furnace and driving down Third street halted in front of the Palace Hotel and went inside to discover, no doubt, what was the best thing to wet down ashes with. While he was inside his hot load set fire to the bed of the wagon and soon a merry little blaze attracted the attention of President of Council, James F. Pletcher, who was on his way to the Pennsy station. Jim sounded the "Bowery War Cry" and all hands reported on the scene ready for action or to do battle.

"General" Banks Helmes, the veteran fire fighter, assumed charge and calling for volunteers soon had old Dobbin unhitched from the rapidly burning shay. A bucket brigade was quickly in action but at this point the Third ward truck rolled out of the Orcutt & Buchanan garage and a hand chemical tank soon fixed the fire, but the old wagon is badly in need of repairs.

CLEARFIELD BOY DIES IN PHILADELPHIA

County Treasurer A. L. Kline was advised yesterday afternoon that his son John Kline was lying seriously ill in a Philadelphia hospital. Mr. Kline and son William left on the 2:28 train last evening for the city. About 7 o'clock a telegram arrived here announcing that the young man had died. The sad tidings were conveyed to the father at Tyrone.

John Kline was the third son of Mr. and Mrs. A. L. Kline and was born in Clearfield about 24 years ago. He was a plumber by trade and had been working at Hog Island. He was taken down with influenza a few days ago and pneumonia quickly developed. The first intimation of his illness received by his family here was when a telegram arrived yesterday morning announcing his illness which was followed by a second which stated his condition was serious.

He leaves a widow and one son about 9 years old. He is also survived by his parents three brothers, Jesse, of Pittsburgh; Austin and William, of Clearfield; and two sisters, Mrs. Edgar Stage, of Clearfield and Ada at home.

BANG! BANG!! BANG!!!

The vermin shoot started off with a bang yesterday morning and crows, hawks, owls, minks, weasels and other small game destructive agencies are already taking to their hiding places kerchuck.

Don't forget to bring your scores to Ira Waite's gun shop for registration.

BERLIN BOLSHEVIKI WILD MEN RUN [illegible]

C. I. C. CLASS HAS SOME BIG DOINGS

The carnival given by the C. I. C. class of the West Side M. E. Sunday school in the church basement last evening was the real and only Simon pure hit of the season. More than three hundred and fifty people thronged the improvised theatre and refreshment salon and all were delightfully entertained and charmingly served with dainty refreshments.

Being the first of April the room was artistically decorated for the "April Fool" occasion and Musical Director Joe Thompson and his justly famous quartette not only carried out the idea and scheme in their personal adornment but furnished some excellent singing. The cook comedians, Spence and Robb, were equally entertaining and kept the crowd roaring at their original, witty sallies.

In addition to the above highly pleasing features, the different booths were huge successes. The "fishing pond," under direction of Meiser; "Men Only," by Remsnyder; "Ladies Only" by Shaw; "Seeing America First" and the "Greatest Swimming Match," by Young and Snavely, were all there with the goods and "got the kale."

The refreshment end of it was neither forgotten or forsaken and the force of pretty waiters, "doiled up to the last minute," were certainly kept jumping trying to serve and handle the crowd.

On account of the capacity of the room being so greatly overtaxed "Hammerstein" Thompson was able to give but about half of his amusement program and it may be necessary to report at a later date in order to allow the boys to get all the good they have in stock out of their systems.

In conclusion, we desire to add, it was some time, "believe me."

New problems of women workers as developed by the war will be discussed at the sixth biennial convention of the National Women's Trade Union League, to be held in Philadelphia next June.

Frank J. Taylor Gives Inside of Revolution—Many Deaths American Occupation

By FRANK J. TAYLOR
(United Press Staff Correspondent)

BERLIN, March 18—By Mail—Bolshevism's recent struggle in Berlin was in many ways like an American Indian war carried on in a modern city, if you can imagine that. The Spartacus group went on the war path after the fashion of native tribes in America three generations ago. In their fighting the Spartacans showed about the same degree of civilization as did the Indians.

To understand how such a situation could take place in a modern city one has to realize that Berlin was harboring many convicts released from prison by the turn of the earlier revolution. Most of these desperadoes are not political victims, but were jailed for killing and robbing. Since they had everything to gain and nothing to lose by the Bolshevist movement, they leagued themselves with the Spartacus group, and for good pay were ready to commit any outrage prescribed. The bolshevists were simply wild upon run riot.

After the government's volunteer army had defeated the organized Spartacus resistance, trouble did not stop. Spartacans lurked in hundreds of buildings, more or less fugitives from justice. From roofs, behind chimneys, from attics and windows, they sniped at government guards and even civilians, with no chance of accomplishing anything other than killing.

In the course of a day's work you would run into three or four or possibly half a dozen of these outbreaks or street fights, as they were reported in the papers. At the first shots, crowds would dive into doorways. The incident ended with a few shots from the goverament troops to restore public confidence and the crowd went on about its business. Berlin's population soon became accustomed to the outbreaks. Not infrequently large crowds would gather to watch move-

JOHN T. SANFORD PNEUMONIA VICTIM

Philipsburg, April 2—Funeral services over the body of John T. Sanford, whose death as noted Monday occurred at the home of his brother, Walter, at Warren, Ohio, on Sunday following an illness of only three days with pneumonia, were held at the home of his sister, Mrs. Alice A. Matley on Eighth street at 7:30 last evening.

John T. Sanford was born 48 Clearfield on May 31, 1854, making his age 64 years, 10 months and 17 days. His parents, Mr. and Mrs. C. E. Sanford, both deceased, were for years honored residents of Philipsburg coming here when the deceased was a young boy. The latter was of a quiet, unassuming disposition, and by his affability remembered by a large circle of friends. For a number of years he was the Adams Express Company agent here, resigning to locate in the west. He had never married.

Besides the brother and sister referred to above five others survive to mourn his death, namely: W. H., of Patton; Mrs. Anna Hamaker, Canton, Ohio; Mrs. B. W. Burke, Columbus, Ohio, Mrs. Fred Bartow, of Warren, Ohio and Mrs. Birch Logan, of Columbus, Ohio. Another brother George, died in Pittsburgh about a year ago.

THE TIME AND MANNER DISPUTED

The local "wild heifer" hunters take offense at the statement regarding the time and manner in which those adventurous bovines were slaughtered or alleged to have been taken into custody by those Moose Creek hunters from Hyde City. The local Davy Crockett's say they had started the wild cattle and had extended their skirmish line on a wide encircling movement when the upriver boys slipped through the lines and "spilled the beans."

Upon hearing a call for help from an American tank, which had become disabled thirty yards from them, the three soldiers left their shelter and started toward the tank, under heavy fire from German machine guns and trench mortars. In crossing the fire-swept area, Corp. O'Shea was mortally wounded and died of his wounds shortly afterward. He lived in Summit, N. J.

The whole nation can profit from the Chicago election. Not because of the election of Bill Thompson as mayor but because the election of Mr. Thompson was brought about because of political division existing among Americans. The pro-German element stuck behind Thompson to the man. The anti-German element were divided in their allegiance to candidates. While the Americans were voting for four different men the Germans were striking solidly behind their candidate.

I wonder what some of these editors who are out of a job ever think of the fellow who has a bill and says he will not buy a bond at the next issue to help put industry on its feet again.

It is not likely that we will see any letters like this written to members of the A. E. F.;

Dear Bill:

Thought I would write you a few lines to try to give you a word of cheer and comfort while you are holding the bridgeheads on the Rhine. I know that you are homesick and that you feel that you have done your part over there and are anxious to get home again. Tell you it hit me hard, old man, to learn that you lost your right arm. The government should bring you home at once and put you in a good hospital and when you are able to work should see to it that you get a good job. I am not going to buy any bonds this time.

The DuBois Express is doubly horrified and shocked at the possibility that Pennsylvanians may have to pay the tremendous and outrageous sum of one-half cent per capita per year to enforce the prohibition laws. Of course they do not put it that way but point to the $30,000 budget for the state which is what it amounts to. The present anxiety of the Express is, however, incomparable with their realization of the fact that J. B. has been dethroned because of his similarity to the baneful influences of "kultur." The Express claims to be unable to see why an enforcement agent is necessary when we do not have an enforcement agency to enforce other statutes. The Express for a solution of their own query, need not look further than some Clearfield county newspapers and some Clearfield county federal law enforcers who have been doing and continue to do everything in their power to defeat the purpose and spirit of the prohibition law.

Grand old Pennsylvania. The Keystone of the union. Endowed with all the natural resources known to the naturalists and the geologists, she needed only an awakening of the people to the fact that wealth alone did not make power and that clear homes, better schools and a divorce from the liquor interests and the rest day commercializer to put her on a level morally, mentally and spiritually with the beauties of nature in which she is enshrouded. Again we say "Grand Old Pennsylvania". More people are saying it today than ever before.

SYNOPSIS.

CHAPTER I—Thomas K. Barnes, wealthy New Yorker, on a walking trip through New England, is caught in a storm miles from his destination. At a crossroads point he meets a girl in the same plight. While they discuss the situation an automobile, sent to meet the girl, arrives and Barnes is given a lift to Hart's tavern, while the girl is taken on to her destination, which she tells Barnes is a place called Green Fancy.

CHAPTER II—At the tavern Barnes falls in with a stranded troupe of "barnstorming" actors, headed by Lyndon Rushcroft, and becomes interested in them.

CHAPTER III—As the storm grows, Barnes finds himself worrying over the safety of the girl, traveling over the mountain roads at what he considers dangerous speed. He learns that Green Fancy is something of a house of mystery. Two mounted men leave the tavern in a manner which arouses Barnes' curiosity.

CHAPTER IV.

An Extraordinary Chambermaid, a Midnight Tragedy, and a Man Who Said "Thank You."

Miss Thackeray was "turning down" his bed when he entered his room after bidding his new actor friends good night. He was staggered and somewhat abashed by the appearance of Miss Thackeray. She was by no means dressed as a chambermaid should be, nor was she as dumb. On the contrary, she confronted him in the choicest raiment that her wardrobe contained, and she was bright and cheery and exceedingly incompetent. It was her costume that shocked him. Not only was she attired in a low-necked, rose-colored evening gown, liberally bespangled with tinsel, but she wore a vast, top-heavy picture hat whose crown of black was almost wholly obscured by a gorgeous white feather that once must have adorned the king of all ostriches. She was not at all his idea of a chambermaid. He started to back out of the door with an apology for having blundered into the wrong room by mistake.

"Come right in," she said cheerily. "I'll soon be through. I suppose I should have done all this an hour ago, but I just had to write a few letters. I am Miss Thackeray. This is Mr. Barnes, I believe."

He bowed, still quite overcome.

"You needn't be scared," she cried, observing his confusion. "This is my regular uniform. I'm starting a new style for chambermaids. Did it paralyze you to find me here?"

"I couldn't believe my eyes."

She abandoned her easy, careless manner. A look of mortification came into her eyes as she straightened up and faced him. Her voice was a trifle husky when she spoke again, after a moment's pause.

"You see, Mr. Barnes, these are the only duds I have with me. It wasn't necessary to put on this hat, of course, but I did it simply to make the character complete. I might just as well make beds and clean washstands in a picture hat as in a low-necked gown, so here I am."

"You See, Mr. Barnes, These Are the Only Duds I Have With Me."

She was a tall, pleasant-faced girl of twenty-three or four, not unlike her father in many respects.

"I am very sorry," he said lamely. "I have heard something of your misfortunes from your father and—the others. It's—it's really hard luck."

"I call it rather good luck to have got away with the only dress in the lot that cost more than tuppence," she said, smiling again. "Lord knows what would have happened to me if they had dropped down on us at the end of the first act. I was the beggar's daughter, you see—absolutely in rags. Glad to have met you. I think you'll find everything nearly all right. Good night, sir."

She closed the door behind her, leaving him standing in the middle of the room, perplexed but amused.

"By George," he said to himself, still staring at the closed door, "they're wonders, all of them. I wish I could do something to help them out of—" He sat down abruptly on the edge of the bed and pulled his wallet from his pocket. He set about counting the bills, a calculating frown in his eyes. Then he stared at the ceiling, summing up. "I'll do it," he said, after a moment of mental figuring. He told off a half dozen bills and slipped them into his pocket. The wallet sought its usual resting place for the night: under a pillow.

He was healthy and he was tired. Two minutes after his head touched the pillow he was sound asleep.

He was aroused shortly after midnight by shouts, apparently just outside his window. A man was calling in a loud voice from the road below; an instant later he heard a tremendous pounding on the tavern door.

Springing out of bed, he rushed to the window. There were horses in front of the house—several of them—and men on foot moving like shadows among them.

Turning from the window, he unlocked and opened the door into the hall. Some one was clattering down the narrow staircase. The bolts on the front door shot back with resounding force, and there came the hoarse jumble of excited voices as men crowded through the entrance. Putnam Jones' voice rose above the clamour.

"Keep quiet! Do you want to wake everybody on the place?" he was saying angrily. "What's up? This is a fine time o' night to be— Good Lord! What's the matter with him?"

"Telephone for a doctor, Put—damn' quick! This one's still alive. The other one is dead as a door nail up at Jim Conley's house. Git ole Doc James down from Saint Liz. Bring him in here, boys. Where's your light? Easy now! Eas-ee!"

Barnes waited to hear no more. His blood seemed to be running ice cold as he retreated into the room and began scrambling for his clothes. The thing he feared had come to pass. Disaster had overtaken her in that wild, senseless dash up the mountain road. He was cursing half aloud as he dressed, cursing the fool who drove that machine and who now was perhaps dying down there in the taproom. "The other one is dead as a door nail," kept running through his head—"the other one."

A dozen men were in the taproom, gathered around two tables that had been drawn together. The men about the table, on which was stretched the figure of the wounded man, were undoubtedly natives: Farmers, woodsmen or employees of the tavern. At a word from Putnam Jones they opened up and allowed Barnes to advance to the side of the man.

"See if you c'n understand him, Mr. Barnes," said the landlord. Perspiration was dripping from his long, rawboned face. "And you, Bacon—you and Dillingford hustle upstairs and get a mattress off'n one of the beds. Stand at the door there, Pike, and don't let any woman in here. Go away, Miss Thackeray! This is no place for you."

Miss Thackeray pushed her way past the man who tried to stop her and joined Barnes.

"It is the place for me," she said sharply. "Haven't you men got sense enough to put something under his head? Where is he hurt? Get that cushion, you. Stick it under here when I lift his head. Oh, you poor thing! We'll be as quick as possible. There!"

The man's eyes were closed, but at the sound of a woman's voice he opened them. The hand with which he clutched at his breast slid off and seemed to be groping for hers. His breathing was terrible. There was blood at the corners of his mouth, and more oozed forth when his lips parted in an effort to speak.

With a courage that surprised even herself, the girl took his hand in hers. It was wet and warm. She did not dare look at it.

"Merci, madame," struggled from the man's lips, and he smiled.

Barnes leaned over and spoke to him in French. The dark, pain-stricken eyes closed, and an almost imperceptible shake of the head signified that he did not understand. Evidently he had acquired only a few of the simple French expressions. Barnes had a slight knowledge of Spanish and Italian, and tried again with no better results. German was his last resort, and he knew he would fail once more, for the man obviously was not Teutonic.

The bloody lips parted, however, and the eyes opened with a piteous, appealing expression in their depths. It was apparent that there was something he wanted to say, something he had to say before he died. He gasped a dozen words or more in a tongue utterly unknown to Barnes, who bent closer to catch the feeble effort. It was he who now shook his head; with a groan the sufferer closed his eyes in despair. He choked and coughed violently an in-

IN EVENING GOWNS

Formal Apparel Shows Tendency to Sheath Draping.

Silver Motifs and Jade Tulle Over Satin—Tunics Are Edged With Fur.

Brilliant we must be if we are to dress for the evening in any of the new frocks. The only choice left us is that between two manners—that is the brilliancy of color or brilliancy of light reflected from spangles and metal cloths.

A few of the more conservative women still wear the browns and blacks of the early season, and these serve as a background to make the other frocks appear still more brilliant. With the amount of spangles, sequins and metallic tissues used this would hardly appear necessary, but the lively shades of rose and purple are decidedly charming. A genius at scenic effects could hardly select a medley of colors with better results than was notable one evening lately at a small affair where the rose color and silver tissue frocks flashed up as vivid notes in contrast to the brown and black velvet gowns worn by the majority of the women.

One cannot help but note that most of the formal evening gowns show a decided tendency to the sheath draping, and so closely is the hem drawn in that it would not be possible to use lace in this manner. Heavier materials serve as foundations and overdraperies of tulle or chiffon may or may not exist. One thing is evident, and that is a complete lack of anything bordering on the quaint or unsophisticated. Frocks of this type are strictly reserved for the jeune fille.

Among the tight, sheathlike gowns is one described as of green jade tulle over a satin foundation, the tulle embroidered in motifs of silver and tufts of feathers. Another is of black tulle embroidered in gold and black. This model also makes use of the feather trimming in black.

Callot's evening gowns, recently exhibited in Paris, are described as altogether wonderful. One of black silk muslin is shrouded in embroidered tulle. A long piece like a stole trails from the back of the neck to the hem of the skirt, although part of it is lost from sight underneath the skirt. Low and round at the neckline, it is edged with jet embroidery and strings of the jet fall from each shoulder.

Cheruit is sponsor for long evening gowns, longer than Callot shows hers, who, however, modifies the shortness by a narrow panel-like train.

Paquin's evening gowns are also long, an effect produced by elongated panels on irregular lengths of material.

Wash Suits for Children.

Despite the fact that there has been considerable talk in cotton goods lines about price cutting and cancellations, manufacturers of children's wash suits are still doing a great business. With the exception of the cases of a few small retailers there have been very few cancellations, and mills are working on the large orders that they received for spring delivery. Military styles are big sellers, and it is expected that they will continue so during the next season.

Domestic servants in Toronto have formed a union and are agitating for an eight-hour day and a six-day week.

BIGGER NAVY BOON TO LABOR

Secretary Daniels Sees Shipyards Busy For Months.

(Another incentive for the public, particularly the wage-earner, to make a success of the Victory Liberty Loan is found in these remarks of Secretary of the Navy Daniels. The naval expansion favored by Mr. Daniels and the prospective labor boom are industrial developments that will be aided by the new Loan.)

By JOSEPHUS DANIELS,
Secretary of the Navy.

During the war the business of the Navy Department expanded, but the end of the war will not see us go back to the small navy which we had when the war began. The pending bill in Congress carries, and any bill that passes must carry, for the present and future needs of the navy, a five-fold increase of navy personnel and naval expenditure over that which prevailed in the early part of 1917.

This means, of course, that we shall not return, in employment of labor, in the repair of our ships, in the construction of our ships already authorized, or any other agencies of a peace navy, to the conditions of two years ago. In 1917, or the early part of it, 36,000 skilled men were employed in our navy yards. When the armistice was signed, there were employed 86,000, and today 92,000. We are employing more men in the navy yards today than at any time during the war, and necessarily so.

You may ask why is this, with the end of the war. There are three reasons. The first is the imperative necessity of repairing and altering and equipping and keeping in repair for constant service the older types of battleships and cruisers which we are employing to bring soldiers back from France. Not only that, we have fitted out and helped to keep in repair scores of transports of the army and the Shipping Board. Ships have returned with many accidents, minor, to be sure, and this has imposed a heavy burden upon the navy yards in keeping their ships in repair.

When the war began there was a lack of enough ships of smaller capacity in the navy to engage in the new warfare against submarines, and we took over yachts and all kinds of small craft with the contract that, at the end of the war, we would return them to their owners in the same condition as we received them. We had to make changes in these ships, and they have had a rigorous service, and that is a large work which, for months, will give employment to skilled men.

With all speed, we are completing the ships already begun, and beginning work on those authorized by the last Congress. So that with the navy, for the next few months, there will be no unemployment, and the men who are skilled in shipbuilding have jobs at their hand at high wages, and we are enabled, by these reasons, to tide over the days before normal conditions will return.

When the armistice was signed there was a drastic necessity to annul contracts or to make such readjustments as would save many millions of dollars. At the same time there was the compulsion upon us, the strongest in America today, that every returning soldier should have his job when he came back home. And in the naval service we have seen to it that every man who left our service at navy yards or stations to go into the war should have his job when he came back; and then there was the compulsion not to discharge men who had rendered faithful service in the war. And how have we done this?

We have sought to give naval work so it will be a stop-gap in the months before normal conditions shall return. For example, we have in these last few days made it possible for every manufacturer in America with a small machine shop to bid on contracts for the small parts of torpedoes. We will assemble them, and instead of giving a contract to a manufacturer of torpedoes—all of them—to a single concern, we are making it possible for any small machine shop in the country to make a part of these torpedoes, assembling them in our new plants. So, in other ways, we are giving work to small factories and keeping the work going.

Now the duty comes to us in these days of transition for State governments to enter upon the work of public improvements; for city governments and for county governments, so that employment may come to labor until conditions in individual enterprises make a demand for labor.

I am not one of those who have fear of the future employment of labor. I am one of those who believe that as soon as we tide over the present conditions the demands of the world for what America makes will be so great that, with ships to carry our products, there will be abundant labor for every man in America who wishes to work. As soon as the terms of peace are signed and the country of Belgium and that portion of France which was devastated, begin their work of upbuilding, there will be demand for almost everything that America makes, and he is the wise business man who, with vision, is getting ready to supply that demand.

ANOTHER DIVORCE RUN

As we have said before divorces or divorce actions run in bunches

During the past week at least a half dozen mismated couples have petitioned the Clearfield County Court for release from the galling matrimonial yoke.

Three of these appliations were made yesterday. Attorney Walter Welch filed a petition in the Prothonotary's office asking that Florence B. Williams be divorced from her husband, Fred B. Williams. They were married Nov. 21, 113, and the husband quit May 11, 1914.

A. L. Edwards, Esq., filed a similar petition on behalf of Clement Coudriet who asks a divorce from Ida Coudriet. They were married Dec 29, 1903, and the wife after treating him cruelly and barbarously and transferring her affections to another male member of the family connection deserted him March 15, 1918.

Pentz & Pentz represent William Gillespie in his effort to legally unload his wife, Stella Gillespie, whom he charges with desertion on Jan 1, 1916, after about eighteen months of wedded bliss, etc.

As one of the results of the war, the women of India have, for the first time, been employed in the Government departments at Delhi, and the question is being discussed as to giving women equal representation with men in the plans of the National India society.

What Fordson Service Will Do For You

There are two big factors to consider when you are buying a tractor—both equally important—the tractor itself and the service rendered.

A tractor which is standing idle because the service station is far away or because the dealer hasn't the proper parts is a poor investment, no matter how well the tractor itself may be made.

Fordson Tractors are selling by the thousands every month and are giving universal satisfaction all over the world because of this:

The tractor itself is made as durable, dependable, efficient and economical as the best engineering skill, the finest materials and workmanship can make it.

And added to this wherever a Fordson Tractor is sold, you will find parts and service as quickly and easily available as the kerosene you put into the tank.

Our service means this to you. First that we will thoroughly instruct you how to get the most out of your tractor—how to operate it properly so as to avoid trouble—how to make all minor repairs and adjustments so that only on rare occasions will you have to call for help.

Then when you do require help for repair work or parts you will find us ready at a moment's notice.

Our stock of parts is complete, our mechanics are experts.

Fordson service is delivered to your farm.

To own a Fordson means that you own a durable, dependable, economical tractor that will serve you every working day in the year.

The Fordson company make it durable and dependable.

We keep it so.

BERNSTORFF ESSAYS PART OF DEMOCRAT

By FRANK J. TAYLOR
(United Press Staff Correspondent)

Berlin, March 6.—Count Bernstorff has joined the ranks of the Demo- crats. He admits he has joined the party and the party admits he has been taken into the fold, though no statement came out officially.

Bernstorff's fluctuation into the Democratic Party came out in an un- conscious and amusing way. In the early days of the revolution, in De- cember, he spoke of "the democrats" and "the socialists"

By the end of January Bernstorff spoke unconsciously or otherwise, of "we democrats." On inquiry he stat- ed he had joined the Democrats and took part in their councils.

Joining the Democrats he re-es- tablished Bernstorff solidly with the Government since the Democrats are in coalition with the Majority Socia- lists.

Bernstorff is mentioned among the first of the "Democrats' 'to get a seat in the new cabinet. He is in good favor with Germans generally, who appreciate his ability, but are dubious as to the way his presence in the Government will be taken by the allied countries, especially America.

There was a strong movement to send him as a peace delegae, which was held back only by apprehension over his possible reception. For this reason a systematic inquiry was in- stituted among Americans and Eng- lishmen in Berlin as to how the Count would be received. The re- sults hardly strengthened his position

Another means of "inquiring" was the report sent out from Berlin and then branded as a "mistake' 'that Bernstorff had been appointed as a peace delegate. The Germans watch- ed eagerly for the reaction from the Allied Press

PATHOS

The sad and pathetic inci- dents grip with a genuine, human appeal. The situations are natural, and never over- drawn and the shadows blend in a perfect harmony with the sunshine of the scenario.

The acting throughout is so simple and unaffected and real, and the climaxes are reached so subtly, that the au- dience is frequently on the verge of tears without quite knowing why.

"Mickey" will dig a deep hole in the heart of everyone who sees her and her charm will linger and live forever.

The glorious romance which starts in the early scenes, hold and fascinates to a happy ending.

No photoplay has yet been produced so filled with adven- ture and thrills as "Mickey." The novelty and intensity of the thrills are indeed remark- able. Fatalities seem to be avoided by a hair's breadth— with a reality that is tremen- dously convincing.

There is thrill upon thrill, and each thrill in these suspense-ex- citing incidents is just a little bit better than the last, until at their climaxes the audience is fairly brought to its feet out of sheer en- thusiasm and excitement.

"Mickey" is full of fun and frolic. It sparkles with hu- mor and bubbles with laugh- ter, so that there is not a dull moment. And when the seven reels are finished the play seems much too short.

stant later.

"Get some water and a towel," cried Miss Thackeray, tremulously. She was very white, but still clung to the man's hand. "Be quick! Behind the bar."

Barnes unbuttoned the coat and revealed the blood-soaked white shirt.

"Please leave this to me," he said in her ear. "There's nothing you can do. Help done for. Please go away."

"Oh, I sha'n't faint—at least, not yet. Poor fellow! I've seen him upstairs and wondered who he was. Is he really going to die?"

"Looks bad," said Barnes, gently opening the shirt front. Several of the crying men turned away suddenly.

"Who is he, Mr. Jones?"

"He is registered as Andrew Paul, from New York. That's all I know. The other man put his name down as Albert Ross. He seemed to be the valet and this man a sort of servant, far as I could make out. They never mixed much and seldom came downstairs. They had their meals in their room."

"There is nothing we can do," said Barnes, "except try to stanch the flow of blood. He is bleeding inwardly, I'm afraid. It's a clean wound, Mr. Jones. Like a rifle shot, I should say."

"That's just what it is," said one of the men, a tall woodsman. "The feller who did it was a dead shot, you c'n bet on that. He got t' other man square through the heart."

"Lordy, but this will raise a rumpus," groaned the landlord. "We'll have detectives an'—"

"I guess they got what was comin' to 'em," said another of the men.

"What's that? Why, they was ridin' peaceful as could be to Spanish Falls. What do you mean by sayin' that, Jim Dailey? Just wait a minute! How does it happen that they were up near your duck house? That certainly isn't on the road to Span—"

"Spanish Falls, I mean! They wasn't goin' to Spanish Falls any more'n I am at present. They had ch'ice houses up the road just above our house," said young Conley, lowering his voice out of consideration for the feelings of the helpless man. "It was about two o'clock, I reckon. I was comin' home from singin' school up at Number Ten, an' I passed the hosses hitched to the fence. Naturally I stopped, curious like. There wasn't no one around, for as I could see, so I thought I'd take a look to see whose hosses they were. I thought it was derned funny, them hosses bein' there at that time o' night an' no one around. Looked mighty queer to me. Course, thinks I, they might belong to somebody visitin' in there at Green Fancy, so I thought I'd—"

"Green Fancy," said Barnes, starting.

"Was it up that far?" demanded Jones.

"They was hitched jest about a hundred yards below Mr. Curtis' propity, on the off side o' the road. I hadn't more'n got to our front gate when I heard some one running in the road a few rods behind me. 'Fore I knowed what was happenin', bang went a gun. My hat jumped out'a my boots. The runnin' had stopped. The horses was snortin' an' tearin', so I thought I'd—"

"Where'd the shot come from?" demanded Jones.

"Off the road some'eres, I couldn't tell just where. Must'a' been up by the wood that cuts in to Green Fancy. So I thought I'd hustle in an' see if pa was awake, an' git my gun. Jest then pa stuck his head out'n the winder an' yelled what the hell's the matter. You butcher life I sung out who I was mighty quick, 'cause pa's purty spry with a gun an' I didn't want him shootin' me for burglars sneaking around the house. While we was talkin' there two of the hosses started our way lickety-split, an' in about two seconds they went by us. It was purty dark, but as plain as day that there was a man in the saddle, bendin' low over one hoss' neck and shoutin' to it. We waited a couple o' minutes, wonderin' what to do an' listenin' to the hoss critter's run'e and further away in the direction of the cross-roads. Then away down there by the pike we heerd another shot. Right there an' then pa said he'd put on his clothes an' we'd get out to see what it was all about.

"Well, pa come out with my gun an' his'n an' we walks up to where I seen the hosses. Shore 'nough, one of 'em was still hitched to the fence, an' t'other was gone. We stood around a minute or two examinin' the hoss an' then pa says let's go up the road a ways an' see if we c'n see anything. An' by gosh, we hadn't gone moren' fifty feet afore we come plumb on a man layin' in the middle of the road. Pa shook him an' he didn't let out a sound. He was warm, but deader'n a tombstone. I wuz fer leavin' him there till we c'd git the coroner, but pa says no. We'd carry him down to our porch an' lay him there, so's he'd be out o' danger. I jumps on Polly an' lights out fer here, Mr. Jones, to telephone up to Saint Liz fer the sheriff an' the coroner, not givin' a dang what I run into on the way. Polly shied somethin' terrible jest afore we got to the pike an' I come derned near bein' throwed. An' right there 'side the road was this feller, all in a heap. Thinks I, you poor cuss, you must 'a' tried to stop that feller on hossback an' he plunked you. That accounted fer the second shot. The thing that worries all of us is did the same man do the shootin', or was there two of 'em, one waitin' down the cross-roads?"

"Must have been two," said Jones, thoughtfully. "The same man couldn't have got down there ahead of him, that's sure. Did anybody go up to Green Fancy to make inquiries?"

"'Twasn't necessary. Mr. Curtis heard the shootin' an' jest before we left he sent a man out to see what it was all about. The old skeezicks that's been drivin' his car lately come down half-dressed. He said nothin' out of the way had happened up at Green Fancy."

"It's most mysterious," said Barnes, glancing round the circle of awed faces. "There must have been some one lying in wait for these men, and with a very definite purpose in mind."

"Strikes me," said Jones, "that these two men were up to some kind of dirty work themselves, else why did they say they were goin' to Spanish Falls? They were queer actin' men, I'll have to say that."

His eyes met Barnes' and there was a queer light in them.

"You don't happen to know anything about this, do you, Mr. Barnes?" he demanded, suddenly.

SCHOOL NOTES

The Sophomore class held a party in the High School Friday with about 40 members and the Faculty present.

The evening was spent in eating and games and entertaining the Tyrone basket ball girls.

The president also gave an excellent talk proving that it is not words that count but actions.

The party broke up at a late hour and all are ready for the Soph-Senior affair.

QUICK RELIEF FROM CONSTIPATION

Get Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets

That is the joyful cry of thousands since Dr. Edwards produced Olive Tablets, the substitute for calomel.

Dr. Edwards, a practicing physician for 17 years and calomel's old-time enemy, discovered the formula for Olive Tablets while treating patients for chronic constipation and torpid livers.

Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets do not contain calomel, but a healing, soothing vegetable laxative.

No griping is the "keynote" of these little sugar-coated, olive-colored tablets. They cause the bowels and liver to act normally. They never force them to unnatural action.

If you have a "dark brown mouth"—a bad breath—a dull, tired feeling—sick headache—torpid liver and are constipated, you'll find quick, sure and only pleasant results from one or two little Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets at bedtime.

Thousands take one or two every night just to keep right. Try them. 10c and 25c per box. All druggists.

NEWS OF OUR NEIGHBORS

CURWENSVILLE

The latest news from Mr. C. S. Russell, who went to Atlantic City the later part of last week for his health is that he is not improving as fast as his friends would wish. It is expected though that when he returns about May 1st his health will be fully as good as before his recent illness.

The committee of Bethesda lodge which was appointed a few weeks ago to look over the different locations for a new lodge building, have not as yet decided on anything definitely. They have three or four locations in view which would prove suitable for lodge purposes and are now figuring as to whether after the the building was erected, it would pay interest on the amount spent for erection and furnishing.

The Live Wire Sunday School class of the M E Church, of which John Haines is the instructor and teacher, went over the top last Sunday as to membership having on the roll 145 members. A picture was made of the class by A. G. Bonsall. This class had been organized and the 145 members is the fruit of a little religious work put in play by the members of the class. This is the largest class composed of men that has ever been in the Methodist school and before many months the membership roll bids fair to reach the 200 mark. Much interest is being manifested in the lessons, and men have been enrolled as members of this class who have not attended a Sabbath school for many years. It is encumbent on each member to use every effort to secure a new member.

No clue to the parties who broke into the Pennsylvania station one day last week has been obtained as yet. Entry to the room was made by breaking a window in front of the men's waiting room and also one in the ticket office Nothing was taken from the office as the thieves were unable to open the safe, and it is evident that money was what they were after as the ticket case was not molested.

Miss Dorothy, a little daughter of Mr. and Mrs. A. G. Bonsall, of Grampian, was operated on at Clearfield hospital, having the adenoids and tonsils removed. The little one stood the operation nobly and is getting along nicely.

The brickyard as Stronach and the mines at Grampian are running right along, the former five days a week and the latter full time. Grampian is one of the busiest little towns at present that can be found between Cherrytree and the county seat

Mr. Ashley Bloom superintendent of the brickyard at Lumber City, was a town visitor yesterday.

M. J. Kelly left for Cato yesterday where he has interest in some coal mines. He is also interested in the Pyramid mines at this place, which are running only about half time at present.

Mr W B. Smith and son Ed. loaded their household goods yesterday for shipment to their new home in Bucks county where the elder Smith has purchased a farm. The family will make the trip by auto.

And the joke was on Father Lynch. Tuesday while he was passing down Walnut street on his way home, he spied a big, fat pocket book lying on the sidewalk. Not noticing that it had a string attached to it with two young girls at the other end, he reached for the wallet, when presto, it eluded his hand and was landed at the side of those who held the end of the string. The Rev. Father had forgotten that yesterday was the first day of April.

A fire at the home of Dewey Hummel, on Bloomington avenue, Saturday evening destroyed clothing etc., to the amount of $200. His wife lit a coal oil stove in the bedroom and went down stairs, not thinking that she had turned the wick up too high. She did not return to the room for almost an hour, and when she did found the room was ablaze. Prompt action on the part of the family and some of the neighbors put the fire out without a call for the firemen. The goods were insured.

"The war Pictures, advertised to be shown, together with a Literary & musical programme, on Friday evening the fourth, in the M. The KITCHEN CABINET

Life is worth while. Its work is not useless, its joys are not superficial. Its discipline is not unnecessary. When disappointments come face them cheerfully.

ECONOMICAL DISHES.

Milk as a food is one of the greatest importance. We are told that a quart of milk should be used daily for each member of the family before any meat is purchased. In thousands of homes where there are little children, milk, because it has increased in price, has been cut down to barely a pint per family while meat which is considered such a necessity is bought regardless of price. Milk, even at 15 cents a quart, is the cheapest protein food we can buy. Skim milk, which sells for half the price of whole milk, makes a most wholesome food and may be used in hundreds of dishes in which the whole milk was thought necessary. It is both unwise and false economy to save on milk and spend it on meat and more expensive protein products.

Dates at the present moment are not cheap and are not economical to buy often, at 50 or 60 cents a pound, but before long they may get back to the old price or near it and we will then feel that we can indulge in them with impunity.

Date Pudding.—Stone a pound of dates and lay them in a baking dish. Cover with milk and let stand an hour or two. Then bake in a slow oven, letting the dish stand in a dish of hot water. Serve either hot or cold. An egg for each cup of milk and a bit of salt and flavoring may be added, making a custard and a dish with more tourishment.

Fruit Rice Pudding.—Take three-fourths of a cup of uncooked rice, four tart apples, one-half cup of raisins, three-fourths of a cup of syrup, one-half teaspoonful of cinnamon, one-third of a teaspoonful of nutmeg, and the juice and rind of a lemon. Wash the rice, add the apples pared and quartered to the rice with three cupfuls of boiling water; add a half teaspoonful of salt and cook until the apples are done; add the remaining ingredients and cook until the rice is tender. Serve with a thin custard for sauce. Or the cooked mixture may be put into a baking dish and topped with a meringue and browned in the oven.

Nellie Maxwell

Cruelty, appearing at first as a general contempt for the rights of nations, has been turned into the chief weapon of war, and used as such by Germany without stint or limit. In the ages to come this will be remembered before everything else, and will be the last thing to be erased from the memory of mankind, writes L. P. Jacks in Atlantic. It will be the heading of the chapter in which history narrates the part which Germany has played in the war. And no one need hesitate to predict that, whatever victories she may have won, or may be destined to win hereafter, will be undone, or turned into ultimate defeats, by the reputation she has achieved as a cruel nation and as an apostle of cruelty in the life of nations.

WILSON HOPEFUL AS "BIG FOUR" RESUME WORK

RUSSIAN PROPOSITION COMING TO PEACE DELEGATES OCCUPYING A GREAT PART OF THEIR INTEREST

BRAND NEW AMENDMENT PLANNED

By Carl D. Groat
(United Press Staff Correspondent)

PARIS, April 2—When the "big four" resumed its session today President Wilson was represented as hopeful that the peace work would be greatly speeded up.

The President's plain speech to his colleagues late Monday was believed to have resulted in clarifying the situation.

The "big four" yesterday afternoon continued their discussion on reparation. The economic blockade in Poland and Esthonia was also discussed.

By Lowell Mellett
(United Press Staff Correspondent)

PARIS, April 2—There is now before the peace conference a definate and concise proposition from the Russian government that cessation of hostilities depends upon Premier Lenine. There is also authoritative information that Carl Kautsky, German radical, is now in Moscow trying to arrange a formal alliance between Germany and Russia. In the light of these two facts the peace delegates are giving more thought to the Russian situation than the daily official communiques indicate.

By Fred S. Ferguson
(United Press Staff Correspondent)

PARIS, April 2—An effort is being made, it was learned today, to insert an amendment in the peace treaty for exacting reparation from Germany, naming a separate amount. This amount would thereby give the amount Germany must pay.

TODAY'S DISPATCHES SHOW GERMAN LABOR DISTURBANCES ON INCREASE

By Frank J. Taylor
(United Press Staff Correspondent)

BERLIN, (Delayed) April 2—General strikes today is spreading [illegible]. Clashes have occurred between workmen and troops in various cities and resulted in casualties. Indications are growing that the uprisings are inspired by the Spartacans who are believed to be employing these disturbances to weaken the government preparatory to beginning a third revolution. The government has proclaimed a state of siege in the whole of the Rhineland defying the 50,000 miners who are on strike. The situation in that region endangers food shipment and the coal supply and may even effect payments to the Allies for maintenance of the armies of occupation.

Release of Herr Daumig, radical leader, charged with starting the Spartacan uprising has temporarily allayed the general strike in Berlin. The metal workers however, are threatening to walk out on their own initiative.

Riots have occurred in Frankfurt and several food shops were stormed. Three persons were killed and many wounded by rifle and machine gun fire. The mob then attacked the police station and a number of hotels. A sailor was dragged from the station and lynched. His body was thrown into the river. Government troops have control of the city. Many persons were killed and wounded in the fighting with soldiers in Castrop near Bochum.

Wurtemburg has joined the general strike. At Studdgart the bourgeoisie have started a counter strike completely paralyzing the city's industries.

FEDERAL ARSENAL AT PITTSBURG IS OBJECT OF REDS

PITTSBURGH, April 2—Police and detectives were rushed to the U. S. Arsenal at 40th and Butler streets here this afternoon in response to a riot call. Army officiers reported that several men were attempting to gain entrance to the government's plant. Army officers at the arsenal said that four men who attempted to open the arsenal gates had escaped in an automobile before the police arrived. Shortly after noon today army authorities were notified by telephone that a suspicious looking man was trying to pry the arsenal gates. Lieut. J. S. Buckley was assigned to investigate outside the arsenal. Lieut. Buckley saw four men, apparently aliens loitering in the shade. He summoned Lieut. Robert Short and started toward the men who fled. After chasing them several blocks the men boarded an automobile which had been waiting for them at the 43rd street bridge and speed away. Police reserves rushed to the scene were stationed outside the arsenal. The uniformed guard was also increased.

Vigilance on the part of secret service men is responsible for the arrest yesterday of Jan Wycisa, a Russian revolutionist, who is a representative of Trotsky. A secret service operator joined the Bolsheviki organization at Pittsburg, learned of the schemes to wreck the arsenal and nipped it in the bud by the prompt arrest of Wycisa. The arrest was made by Deputy U. S. Marshal Ira C. McCloskey of this city.

HE IS NOT GUILTY

John Variot, of Frenchville, transaced business in Clearfield yesterday. He called at The Progress office with hay on his horns regarding "Uncle Peter's Dream," which appeared in this paper last week upon the day in which Mr. Variot was in town on a previous visit. Some of his neighbors charged him with being responsible for its publication and he wanted us to set him right in the matter. We cheerfully do so, by stating that the article, which was supposed to apply to road conditions in Cevington township, was not written or suggested by Mr. Variot, who had no knowledge of it whatever ever until it appared in the paper.

COAL PRODUCERS MEETING IS POSTPONED

The special meeting of The Central Pennsylvania Coal Producers' association called for April 3d, to vote on the Proposed Plan of Cooperation between the United States government and the Coal Mining Industry, has been postponed due to the postponement of the National Coal meeting on April 4th at Cleveland.

The National Coal association postponed its Cleveland meeting because the price fixing board of the department of commerce has submiteed a counter plan which is held in temporary abeyance, due to the lack of agreement between Chairman Peek of the price fixing board and Director General ines of the United States Railroad Administration.

THE WORM SOON TURNED

Bill Wrigley, of the Elecric Supply Co. made a quick trip to the Clearfield Hospital last evening to render first aid to the electric lighting system, which had been reported to him by telephone as being out of business. On arrival and announcing his business Bill was informed a mistake must have been made as all the lights were nicely trimmed and burning.

Bill took the matter up with the telephone girl and on referring to the number from which the call was recived found it was Bud Lee's phone. April first wsa not yet in the discard.

Maynard Shaw is home from Fort Sam Houston, Texas, having been mustered out of the service.

PROGRESSIVE FIRE ON THE BOWERY

A horse and wagon on fire is a rare sight these days of auto spoding but "Bowery" habitues were treated to such an exhibition about 2 o'clock this afternoon. Isaac Poole, of Paradise loaded his Dearborn wagon with ashes from the Windsor Hotel furnace and driving down Third street halted in front of the Palace Hotel and went inside to discover, no doubt, what was the best thing to wet down ashes with. While he was inside his hot load set fire to the bed of the wagon and soon a merry little blaze attracted the attention of President of Council, James F. Pletcher, who was on his way to the Pennsy station. Jim sounded the "Bowery War Cry" and all hands reported on the scene ready for action or to do battle.

"General" Banks Helmes, the veteran fire fighter, assumed charge and calling for volunteers soon had old Dobbin unhitched from the rapidly burning shay. A bucket brigade was quickly in action but at this point the Third ward truck rolled out of the Orcutt & Buchanan garage and a hand chemical tank soon fixed the fire, but the old wagon is badly in need of repairs.

CLEARFIELD BOY DIES IN PHILADELPHIA

County Treasurer A. L. Kline was advised yesterday afternoon that his son John Kline was lying seriously ill in a Philadelphia hospital. Mr. Kline and son William left on the 2:28 train last evening for the city. About 7 o'clock a telegram arrived here announcing that the young man had died. The sad tidings were conveyed to the father at Tyrone.

John Kline was the third son of Mr. and Mrs. A. L. Kline and was born in Clearfield about 24 years ago. He was a plumber by trade and had been working at Hog Island. He was taken down with influenza a few days ago and pneumonia quickly developed. The first intimation of his illness received by his family here was when a telegram arrived yesterday morning announcing his illness which was followed by a second which stated his condition was serious.

He leaves a widow and one son about 9 years old. He is also survived by his parents three brothers, Jesse, of Pittsburgh; Austin and William, of Clearfield; and two sisters, Mrs. Edgar Stage, of Clearfield and Ada at home.

BANG! BANG!! BANG!!!

JOHN T. SANFORD PNEUMONIA VICTIM

Philipsburg, April 2—Funeral services over the body of John T. Sanford, whose death as noted Monday occurred at the home of his brother, Walter, at Warren, Ohio, on Sunday following an illness of only three days with pneumonia, were held at the home of his sister, Mrs. Alice A. Matley on Eighth street at 7:30 last evening.

John T. Sanford was born in Clearfield on May 11, 1864, making his age 54 years, 10 months and 17 days. His parents, Mr. and Mrs. C. E. Sanford, both deceased, were for years honored residents of Philipsburg coming here when the children were a young boy. The latter was of a quiet, unassuming disposition, and for his many [illegible] remembered by a large circle of friends. For a number of years he was the Adams Express Company agent here, resigning to locate in the west. He had never married.

Besides the brother and sister referred to above five others survive to mourn his death, namely: W. H., of Patton; Mrs. Anna Hamaker, Canton, Ohio; Mrs. B. W. Burke, Columbus, Ohio, Mrs. Fred Bartow, of Warren, Ohio and Mrs. Birch Logan, of Columbus, Ohio. Another brother George, died in Pittsburgh about a year ago.

THE TIME AND MANNER DISPUTED

The local "wild heifer" hunters take offense at the statement regarding the time and manner in which those adventurous bovines were slaughtered or alleged to have been taken into custody by those Moose Creek hunters from Hyde City. The local Davy Crockett's say they had started the wild cattle and had extended their skirmish line on a wide encircling movement when the upriver boys slipped through the lines and "spilled the beans."

Corporal, M. G. Co., 107th Infantry.

Corp. O'Shea was awarded the Distinguished Service Cross for conspicuous gallantry in action near Le Catelet, France, September 29, 1918. Becoming separated from their platoon by smoke barrage, Corp. O'Shea, with two other soldiers, took cover in a shell hole well within the enemy lines. Upon hearing a call for help from an American tank, which had become disabled thirty yards from them, the three soldiers left their shelter and started toward the tank, under heavy fire from German machine guns and trench mortars. In crossing the fire-swept area, Corp. O'Shea was mortally wounded and died of his wounds shortly afterward. He lived in Summit, N. J.

C. I. C. CLASS HAS SOME BIG DOINGS

The carnival given by the C. I. C. class of the West Side M. E. Sunday school in the church basement last evening was the real and only Simon pure hit of the season. More than three hundred and fifty people thronged the improvised theatre and refreshment salon and all were delightfully entertained and charmingly served with dainty refreshments.

Being the first of April the room was artistically decorated for the "April Fool" occasion and Musical Director Joe Thompson and his justly famous quartette not only carried out the idea and scheme in their personal adornment but furnished some excellent singing. The cook comedians, Spence and Robb, were equally entertaining and kept the crowd roaring at their original, witty sallies.

In addition to the above highly pleasing features, the different booths were huge successes. The "fishing pond," under direction of Meiser; "Men Only," by Remsnyder; "Ladies Only" by Shaw; "Seeing America First" and the "Greatest Swimming Match," by Young and Snavely, were all there with the goods and "get the kale."

The refreshment end of it was neither forgotten or forsaken and the force of pretty waiters, "doiled up to the last minute," were certainly kept jumping trying to serve and handle the crowd.

On account of the capacity of the room being so greatly overtaxed "Hammerstein" Thompson was able to give but about half of his amusement program and it may be necessary to report at a later date in order to allow the boys to get all the good they have in stock out of their systems.

In conclusion, we desire to add, it was some time, "believe me."

New problems of women workers as developed by the war will be discussed at the sixth biennial convention of the National Women's Trade Union League, to be held in Philadelphia next June.

Frank J. Taylor Gives Inside of Revolution—Many Deaths American Occupation

By FRANK J. TAYLOR
(United Press Staff Correspondent)

BERLIN, March 18—By Mail—Bolshevism's recent struggle in Berlin was in many ways like an American Indian war carried on in a modern city, if you can imagine that. The Spartacus group went on the war path after the fashion of native tribes in America three generations ago. In their fighting the Spartacans showed about the same degree of civilization as did the Indians.

To understand how such a situation could take place in a modern city one has to realize that Berlin was harboring many convicts released from prison by the turn of the earlier revolution. Most of these desperadoes are not political victims, but were jailed for killing and robbing. Since they had everything to gain and nothing to lose by the Bolshevist movement, they leagued themselves with the Spartacus group, and for good pay were ready to commit any outrage prescribed. The bolsheviki were simply wild upon run riot.

After the government's volunteer army had defeated the organized Spartacus resistance, trouble did not stop. Spartacans lurked in hundreds of buildings, more or less fugitives from justice. From roofs, behind chimneys, from attics and windows, they sniped at government guards and even civilians, with no chance of accomplishing anything other than killing.

In the course of a day's work you would run into three or four or possibly half a dozen of these outbreaks or street fights, as they were reported in the papers. At the first shots, crowds would dive into doorways. The incident ended with a few shots from the government troops to restore public confidence and the crowd went on about its business. Berlin's population soon became accustomed to the outbreaks. Not infrequently large crowds would gather to watch move-

The whole nation can profit from the Chicago election. Not because of the election of Bill Thompson as mayor but because the election of Mr. Thompson was brought about because of political division existing among Americans. The pro-German element stuck behind Thompson to the man. The anti-German element were divided in their allegiance to candidates. While the Americans were voting for four different men the pro-Germans were striking solidly behind their candidate.

I wonder what some of these editors who are out of a job ever think of the fellow who has a job and says he will not buy a bond at the next issue to help put industry on its feet again.

It is not likely that we will see any letters like this written to members of the A. E. F.;

Dear Bill:

Thought I would write you a few lines to try to give you a word of cheer and comfort while you are holding the bridgeheads on the Rhine. I know that you are homesick and that you feel that you have done your part over there and are anxious to get home again. Tell you it hit me hard, old man, to learn that you lost your right arm. The government should bring you home at once and put you in a good hospital and when you are able to work should see to it that you get a good job. Those allotments and the back pay should be paid at once.

I am not going to buy any bonds this time.

Yours affectionately

The DuBois Express is doubly horrified and shocked at the possibility that Pennsylvanians may have to pay the tremendous and outrageous sum of one-half cent per capita per year to enforce the prohibition laws. Of course they do not put it that way but point to the $30,000 budget for the state which is what it amounts to. The present anxiety of the Express is, however, incomparable with their realization of the fact that J. B. has been dethroned because of his similarity to the baneful influences of "kultur." The Express claims to be unable to see why an enforcement agent is necessary when we do not have an enforcement agency to enforce other statutes. The Express for a solution of their own query, need not look further than some Clearfield county newspapers and some Clearfield county federal law enforcers who have been doing and continue to do everything in their power to defeat the purpose and spirit of the prohibition law.

Grand old Pennsylvania. The Keystone of the union. Endowed with all the natural resources known to the naturalists and the geologists, she needed only an awakening of the people to the fact that wealth alone did not make power and that clear homes, better schools and a divorce from the liquor interests and the rest day commercializer to put her on a level morally, mentally and spiritually with the beauties of nature in which she is enshrouded. Again we say "Grand Old Pennsylvania". More people are saying it today than ever before.

SYNOPSIS.

CHAPTER I—Thomas K. Barnes, wealthy New Yorker, on a walking trip through New England, is caught in a storm miles from his destination. At a crossroads point he meets a girl in the same plight. While they discuss the situation an automobile, sent to meet the girl, arrives and Barnes is given a lift to Hart's tavern, while the girl is taken on to her destination, which she tells Barnes is a place called Green Fancy.

CHAPTER II—At the tavern Barnes falls in with a stranded troupe of "barnstorming" actors, headed by Lyndon Rushcroft, and becomes interested in them.

CHAPTER III—As the storm grows, Barnes finds himself worrying over the safety of the girl, traveling over the mountain roads at what he considers dangerous speed. He learns that Green Fancy is something of a house of mystery. Two mounted men leave the tavern in a manner which arouses Barnes' curiosity.

CHAPTER IV.

An Extraordinary Chambermaid, a Midnight Tragedy, and a Man Who Said "Thank You."

Miss Thackeray was "turning down" his bed when he entered his room after bidding his new actor friends good night. He was staggered and somewhat abashed by the appearance of Miss Thackeray. She was by no means dressed as a chambermaid should be, nor was she as dumb. On the contrary, she confronted him in the choicest raiment that her wardrobe contained, and she was bright and cheery and exceedingly incompetent. It was her costume that shocked him. Not only was she attired in a low-necked, rose-colored evening gown, liberally bespangled with tinsel, but she wore a vast, top-heavy picture hat whose crown of black was almost wholly obscured by a gorgeous white feather that once must have adorned the king of all ostriches. She was not at all his idea of a chambermaid. He started to back out of the door with an apology for having blundered into the wrong room by mistake.

"Come right in," she said cheerily. "I'll soon be through. I suppose I should have done all this an hour ago, but I just had to write a few letters. I am Miss Thackeray. This is Mr. Barnes, I believe."

He bowed, still quite overcome.

"You needn't be scared," she cried, observing his confusion. "This is my regular uniform. I'm starting a new style for chambermaids. Did it paralyze you to find me here?"

"I couldn't believe my eyes."

She abandoned her easy, careless manner. A look of mortification came into her eyes as she straightened up and faced him. Her voice was a trifle husky when she spoke again, after a moment's pause.

"You see, Mr. Barnes, these are the only duds I have with me. It wasn't necessary to put on this hat, of course, but I did it simply to make the character complete. I might just as well make beds and clean washstands in a picture hat as in a low-necked gown, so here I am."

"You See, Mr. Barnes, These Are the Only Duds I Have With Me."

She was a tall, pleasant-faced girl of twenty-three or four, not unlike her father in many respects.

"I am very sorry," he said lamely. "I have heard something of your misfortunes from your father and—the others. It's—it's really hard luck."

"I call it rather good luck to have got away with the only dress in the lot that cost more than tuppence," she said, smiling again. "Lord knows what would have happened to me if they had dropped down on us at the end of the first act. I was the beggar's daughter, you see—absolutely in rags. Glad to have met you. I think you'll find everything nearly all right. Good night, sir."

She closed the door behind her, leaving him standing in the middle of the room, perplexed but amused.

"By George," he said to himself, still staring at the closed door, "they're wonders, all of them. I wish I could do something to help them out of—" He sat down abruptly on the edge of the bed and pulled his wallet from his pocket. He set about counting the bills, a calculating frown in his eyes. Then he stared at the ceiling, summing up. "I'll do it," he said, after a moment of mental figuring. He told off a half dozen bills and slipped them into his pocket. The wallet sought its usual resting place for the night: under a pillow.

He was healthy and he was tired. Two minutes after his head touched the pillow he was sound asleep.

He was aroused shortly after midnight by shouts, apparently just outside his window. A man was calling in a loud voice from the road below; an instant later he heard a tremendous pounding on the tavern door.

Springing out of bed, he rushed to the window. There were horses in front of the house—several of them—and men on foot moving like shadows among them.

Turning from the window, he unlocked and opened the door into the hall. Some one was clattering down the narrow staircase. The bolts on the front door shot back with resounding force, and there came the hoarse jumble of excited voices as men crowded through the entrance. Putnam Jones' voice rose above the clamour.

"Keep quiet! Do you want to wake everybody on the place?" he was saying angrily. "What's up? This is a fine time o' night to be— Good Lord! What's the matter with him?"

"Telephone for a doctor, Put—damn' quick! This one's still alive. The other one is dead as a door nail up at Jim Conley's house. Git ole Doc James down from Saint Liz. Bring him in here, boys. Where's your light? Easy now! Eas-ee!"

Barnes waited to hear no more. His blood seemed to be running ice cold as he retreated into the room and began scrambling for his clothes. The thing he feared had come to pass. Disaster had overtaken her in that wild, senseless dash up the mountain road. He was cursing half aloud as he dressed, cursing the fool who drove that machine and who now was perhaps dying down there in the taproom. "The other one is dead as a door nail," kept running through his head—"the other one."

A dozen men were in the taproom, gathered around two tables that had been drawn together. The men about the table, on which was stretched the figure of the wounded man, were undoubtedly natives: Farmers, woodsmen or employees of the tavern. At a word from Putnam Jones they opened up and allowed Barnes to advance to the side of the man.

"See if you c'n understand him, Mr. Barnes," said the landlord. Perspiration was dripping from his long, rawboned face. "And you, Bacon—you and Dillingford hustle upstairs and get a mattress off'n one of the beds. Stand at the door there, Pike, and don't let any woman in here. Go away, Miss Thackeray! This is no place for you."

Miss Thackeray pushed her way past the man who tried to stop her and joined Barnes.

"It is the place for me," she said sharply. "Haven't you men got sense enough to put something under his head? Where is he hurt? Get that cushion, you. Stick it under here when I lift his head. Oh, you poor thing! We'll be as quick as possible. There!"

The man's eyes were closed, but at the sound of a woman's voice he opened them. The hand with which he clutched at his breast slid off and seemed to be groping for hers. His breathing was terrible. There was blood at the corners of his mouth, and more oozed forth when his lips parted in an effort to speak.

With a courage that surprised even herself, the girl took his hand in hers. It was wet and warm. She did not dare look at it.

"Merci, madame," struggled from the man's lips, and he smiled.

Barnes leaned over and spoke to him in French. The dark, pain-stricken eyes closed, and an almost imperceptible shake of the head signified that he did not understand. Evidently he had acquired only a few of the simple French expressions. Barnes had a slight knowledge of Spanish and Italian, and tried again with no better results. German was his last resort, and he knew he would fail once more, for the man obviously was not Teutonic.

The bloody lips parted, however, and the eyes opened with a piteous, appealing expression in their depths. It was apparent that there was something he wanted to say, something he had to say before he died. He gasped a dozen words or more in a tongue utterly unknown to Barnes, who bent closer to catch the feeble effort. It was he who now shook his head; with a groan the sufferer closed his eyes in despair. He choked and coughed violently an in-

IN EVENING GOWNS

Formal Apparel Shows Tendency to Sheath Draping.

Silver Motifs and Jade Tulle Over Satin—Tunics Are Edged With Fur.

Brilliant we must be if we are to dress for the evening in any of the new frocks. The only choice left us is that between two manners—that is the brilliancy of color or brilliancy of light reflected from spangles and metal cloths.

A few of the more conservative women still wear the browns and blacks of the early season, and these serve as a background to make the other frocks appear still more brilliant. With the amount of spangles, sequins and metallic tissues used this would hardly appear necessary, but the lively shades of rose and purple are decidedly charming. A genius at scenic effects could hardly select a medley of colors with better results than was notable one evening lately at a small affair where the rose color and silver tissue frocks flashed up as vivid notes in contrast to the brown and black velvet gowns worn by the majority of the women.

One cannot help but note that most of the formal evening gowns show a decided tendency to the sheath draping, and so closely is the hem drawn in that it would not be possible to use lace in this manner. Heavier materials serve as foundations and overdraperies of tulle or chiffon may or may not exist. One thing is evident, and that is a complete lack of anything bordering on the quaint or unsophisticated. Frocks of this type are strictly reserved for the jeune fille.

Among the tight, sheathlike gowns is one described as of green jade tulle over a satin foundation, the tulle embroidered in motifs of silver and tufts of feathers. Another is of black tulle embroidered in gold and black. This model also makes use of the feather trimming in black.

Callot's evening gowns, recently exhibited in Paris, are described as altogether wonderful. One of black silk muslin is shrouded in embroidered tulle. A long piece like a stole trails from the back of the neck to the hem of the skirt, although part of it is lost from sight underneath the skirt. Low and round at the neckline, it is edged with jet embroidery and strings of the jet fall from each shoulder.

Cheruit is sponsor for long evening gowns, longer than Callot shows hers, who, however, modifies the shortness by a narrow panel-like train.

Paquin's evening gowns are also long, an effect produced by elongated panels on irregular lengths of material.

Wash Suits for Children.

Despite the fact that there has been considerable talk in cotton goods lines about price cutting and cancellations, manufacturers of children's wash suits are still doing a great business. With the exception of the cases of a few small retailers there have been very few cancellations, and mills are working on the large orders that they received for spring delivery. Military styles are big sellers, and it is expected that they will continue so during the next season.

Domestic servants in Toronto have formed a union and are agitating for an eight-hour day and a six-day week.

BIGGER NAVY BOON TO LABOR

Secretary Daniels Sees Shipyards Busy For Months.

(Another incentive for the public, particularly the wage-earner, to make a success of the Victory Liberty Loan is found in these remarks of Secretary of the Navy Daniels. The naval expansion favored by Mr. Daniels and the prospective labor boom are industrial developments that will be aided by the new Loan.)

By JOSEPHUS DANIELS,
Secretary of the Navy.

During the war the business of the Navy Department expanded, but the end of the war will not see us go back to the small navy which we had when the war began. The pending bill in Congress carries, and any bill that passes must carry, for the present and future needs of the navy, a five-fold increase of navy personnel and naval expenditure over that which prevailed in the early part of 1917.

This means, of course, that we shall not return, in employment of labor, in the repair of our ships, in the construction of our ships already authorized, or any other agencies of a peace navy, to the conditions of two years ago. In 1917, or the early part of it, 36,000 skilled men were employed in our navy yards. When the armistice was signed, there were employed 86,000, and today 92,000. We are employing more men in the navy yards today than at any time during the war, and necessarily so.

You may ask why is this, with the end of the war. There are three reasons. The first is the imperative necessity of repairing and altering and equipping and keeping in repair for constant service the older types of battleships and cruisers which we are employing to bring soldiers back from France. Not only that, we have fitted out and helped to keep in repair scores of transports of the army and the Shipping Board. Ships have returned with many accidents, minor, to be sure, and this has imposed a heavy burden upon the navy yards in keeping their ships in repair.

When the war began there was a lack of enough ships of smaller capacity in the navy to engage in the new warfare against submarines, and we took over yachts and all kinds of small craft with the contract that, at the end of the war, we would return them to their owners in the same condition as we received them. We had to make changes in these ships, and they have had a rigorous service, and that is a large work which, for months, will give employment to skilled men.

With all speed, we are completing the ships already begun, and beginning work on those authorized by the last Congress. So that with the navy, for the next few months, there will be no unemployment, and the men who are skilled in shipbuilding have jobs at their hand at high wages, and we are enabled, by these reasons, to tide over the days before normal conditions will return.

When the armistice was signed there was a drastic necessity to annul contracts or to make such readjustments as would save many millions of dollars. At the same time there was the compulsion upon us, the strongest in America today, that every returning soldier should have his job when he came back home. And in the naval service we have seen to it that every man who left our service at navy yards or stations to go into the war should have his job when he came back; and then there was the compulsion not to discharge men who had rendered faithful service in the war. And how have we done this?

We have sought to give naval work so it will be a stop-gap in the months before normal conditions shall return. For example, we have in these last few days made it possible for every manufacturer in America with a small machine shop to bid on contracts for the small parts of torpedoes. We will assemble them, and instead of giving a contract to a manufacturer of torpedoes—all of them—to a single concern, we are making it possible for any small machine shop in the country to make a part of these torpedoes, assembling them in our new plants. So, in other ways, we are giving work to small factories and keeping the work going.

Now the duty comes to us in these days of transition for State governments to enter upon the work of public improvements; for city governments and for county governments, so that employment may come to labor until conditions in individual enterprises make a demand for labor.

I am not one of those who have fear of the future employment of labor. I am one of those who believe that as soon as we tide over the present conditions the demands of the world for what America makes will be so great that, with ships to carry our products, there will be abundant labor for every man in America who wishes to work. As soon as the terms of peace are signed and the country of Belgium and that portion of France which was devastated, begin their work of upbuilding, there will be demand for almost everything that America makes, and he is the wise business man who, with vision, is getting ready to supply that demand.

An oil company has been organized at Temple, Texas, with none but women as officers and stockholders.

As we have said before divorces or divorce actions run in bunches

During the past week at least a half dozen mismated couples have petitioned the Clearfield County Court for release from the galling matrimonial yoke.

Three of these appliations were made yesterday. Attorney Walter Welch filed a petition in the Prothonotary's office asking that Florence B. Williams be divorced from her husband, Fred B. Williams. They were married Nov. 21, 113, and the husband quit May 11, 1914.

A. L. Edwards, Esq., filed a similar petition on behalf of Clement Coudriet who asks a divorce from Ida Coudriet. They were married Dec 29, 1903, and the wife after treating him cruelly and barbarously and transferring her affections to another male member of the family connection deserted him March 15, 1918.

Pentz & Pentz represent William Gillespie in his effort to legally unload his wife, Stella Gillespie, whom he charges with desertion on Jan 1, 1916, after about eighteen months of wedded bliss, etc.

As one of the results of the war, the women of India have, for the first time, been employed in the Government departments at Delhi, and the question is being discussed as to giving women equal representation with men in the plans of the National India society.

What Fordson Service Will Do For You

There are two big factors to consider when you are buying a tractor—both equally important—the tractor itself and the service rendered.

A tractor which is standing idle because the service station is far away or because the dealer hasn't the proper parts is a poor investment, no matter how well the tractor itself may be made.

Fordson Tractors are selling by the thousands every month and are giving universal satisfaction all over the world because of this:

The tractor itself is made as durable, dependable, efficient and economical as the best engineering skill, the finest materials and workmanship can make it.

And added to this wherever a Fordson Tractor is sold, you will find parts and service as quickly and easily available as the kerosene you put into the tank.

Our service means this to you. First that we will thoroughly instruct you how to get the most out of your tractor—how to operate it properly so as to avoid trouble—how to make all minor repairs and adjustments so that only on rare occasions will you have to call for help.

Then when you do require help for repair work or parts you will find us ready at a moment's notice.

Our stock of parts is complete, our mechanics are experts.

Fordson service is delivered to your farm.

To own a Fordson means that you own a durable, dependable, economical tractor that will serve you every working day in the year.

The Fordson company make it durable and dependable.

We keep it so.

BERNSTORFF ESSAYS PART OF DEMOCRAT

By FRANK J. TAYLOR
(United Press Staff Correspondent)

Berlin, March 6.—Count Bernstorff has joined the ranks of the Democrats. He admits he has joined the party and the party admits he has been taken into the fold, though no statement came out officially.

Bernstorff's fluctuation into the Democratic Party came out in an unconscious and amusing way. In the early days of the revolution, in December, he spoke of "the democrats" and "the socialists"

By the end of January Bernstorff spoke unconsciously or otherwise, of "we democrats." On inquiry he stated he had joined the Democrats and took part in their councils.

Joining the Democrats he re-established Bernstorff solidly with the Government since the Democrats are in coalition with the Majority Socialists.

Bernstorff is mentioned among the first of the "Democrats' 'to get a seat in the new cabinet. He is in good favor with Germans generally, who appreciate his ability, but are dubious as to the way his presence in the Government will be taken by the allied countries, especially America.

There was a strong movement to send him as a peace delegae, which was held back only by apprehension over his possible reception. For this reason a systematic inquiry was instituted among Americans and Englishmen in Berlin as to how the Count would be received. The results hardly strengthened his position

Another means of "inquiring" was the report sent out from Berlin and then branded as a "mistake' 'that Bernstorff had been appointed as a peace delegate. The Germans watched eagerly for the reaction from the Allied Press

PATHOS

The sad and pathetic incidents grip with a genuine human appeal. The situations are natural, and never overdrawn and the shadows blend in a perfect harmony with the sunshine of the scenario.

The acting throughout is so simple and unaffected and real, and the climaxes are reached so subtly, that the audience is frequently on the verge of tears without quite knowing why.

"Mickey" will dig a deep hole in the heart of everyone who sees her and her charm will linger and live forever.

LOVE

The heart interest in "Mickey" has never before been surpassed in motion picture history. Although the incidents attending Mickey's courtship are unusual, they are as beautifully human and natural as love itself.

The glorious romance which starts in the early scenes, hold and fascinates to a happy ending.

There is a deep, heartfelt appeal in the unaffected, wholesome love of this adorable little girl.

ADVENTURE

No photoplay has yet been produced so filled with adventure and thrills as "Mickey." The novelty and intensity of the thrills are indeed remarkable. Fatalities seem to be avoided by a hair's breadth—with a reality that is tremendously convincing.

There is thrill upon thrill, and each thrill in these suspense-exciting incidents is just a little bit better than the last, until at their climaxes the audience is fairly brought to its feet out of sheer enthusiasm and excitement.

HUMOR

"Mickey" is full of fun and frolic. It sparkles with humor and bubbles with laughter, so that there is not a dull moment. And when the seven reels are finished the play seems much too short.

The comedy is built upon the reality of human incidents and situations. Every laugh is sincere, running through the play as golden threads run through a piece of cloth, giving it pattern and texture and richness.

stant later.

"Get some water and a towel," cried Miss Thackeray, tremulously. She was very white, but still clung to the man's hand. "Be quick! Behind the bar."

Barnes unbuttoned the coat and revealed the blood-soaked white shirt.

"Please leave this to me," he said in her ear. "There's nothing you can do. Help done for. Please go away."

"Oh, I sha'n't faint—at least, not yet. Poor fellow! I've seen him upstairs and wondered who he was. Is he really going to die?"

"Looks bad," said Barnes, gently opening the shirt front. Several of the crying men turned away suddenly.

"Who is he, Mr. Jones?"

"He is registered as Andrew Paul, from New York. That's all I know. The other man put his name down as Albert Ross. He seemed to be the valet and this man a sort of servant, far as I could make out. They never mixed much and seldom came downstairs. They had their meals in their room."

"There is nothing we can do," said Barnes, "except try to stanch the flow of blood. He is bleeding inwardly, I'm afraid. It's a clean wound, Mr. Jones. Like a rifle shot, I should say."

"That's just what it is," said one of the men, a tall woodsman. "The feller who did it was a dead shot, you c'n bet on that. He got t' other man square through the heart."

"Lordy, but this will raise a rumpus," groaned the landlord. "We'll have detectives an'—"

"I guess they got what was comin' to 'em," said another of the men.

"What's that? Why, they was ridin' peaceful as could be to Spanish Falls. What do you mean by sayin' that, Jim Dailey? Just wait a minute! How does it happen that they were up near your duck house? That certainly isn't on the road to Span—"

"Spanish Falls, I mean. They wasn't goin' to Spanish Falls any more'n I am at present. They had ch'ice houses up the road just above our house," said young Conley, lowering his voice out of consideration for the feelings of the helpless man. "It was about two o'clock, I reckon. I was comin' home from singin' school up at Number Ten, an' I passed the hosses hitched to the fence. Naturally I stopped, curious like. There wasn't no one around, for as I could see, so I thought I'd take a look to see whose hosses they were. I thought it was derned funny, them hosses bein' there at that time o' night an' no one around. Looked mighty queer to me. Course, thinks I, they might belong to somebody visitin' in there at Green Fancy, so I thought I'd—"

"Green Fancy," said Barnes, starting.

"Was it up that far?" demanded Jones.

"They was hitched jest about a hundred yards below Mr. Curtis' propity, on the off side o' the road. I hadn't more'n got to our front gate when I heard some one running in the road behind me. 'Fore I knowed what was happenin', bang went a gun. My hat jumped out'a my boots. The runnin' had stopped. The horses was snortin' an' tearing, so I thought I'd—"

"Where'd the shot come from?" demanded Jones.

"Over the road some'eres, I couldn't say just where. Must'a' been up by the wood that cuts in to Green Fancy. So I thought I'd hustle in an' see if pa was awake, an' git my gun. Jest then pa stuck his head out'n the winder an' yelled what the hell's the matter. You betcher life I sung out who I was mighty quick, 'cause pa's purty apt to fly with a gun an' I didn't want him takin' me for burglars sneaking around the house. While we was talkin' there one of the hosses started our way plumb split, an' in about two seconds it went by us. It was purty dark, but I saw plain as day that there was a man in the saddle, bendin' low over the hoss' neck and shoutin' to it. We waited a couple o' minutes, wonderin' what to do, an' listenin' to the hoss gittin' further and further away in the direction of the cross-roads. Then away down there by the pike we heerd another shot. Right there an' then pa said he'd put on his clothes an' we'd git out to see what it was all about.

"Well, pa come out with my gun an' his'n an' we walks up to where I seen the hosses. Shore 'nough, one of 'em was still hitched to the fence, an' t'other was gone. We stood around a minute or two examinin' the hoss an' then pa says let's go up the road a ways an' see if we c'n see anything. An' by gosh, we hadn't gone moren' fifty feet afore we come plumb on a man layin' in the middle of the road. Pa shook him an' he didn't let out a sound. He was warm, but deader'n a tombstone. I wuz fer leavin' him there till we c'd git the coroner, but pa says no. We'd carry him down to our porch an' lay him there, so's he'd be out o' danger. I jumps on Polly an' lights out fer here, Mr. Jones, to telephone up to Saint Liz fer the sheriff an' the coroner, not givin' a dang what I run into on the way. Polly shied somethin' terrible jest afore we got to the pike an' I come derned near bein' throwed. An' right there 'side the road was this feller, all in a heap. Thinks I, you poor cuss, you must 'a' tried to stop that feller on hossback an' he plunked you. That accounted fer the second shot. The thing that worries all of us is did the same man do the shootin', or was there two of 'em, one waitin' down the cross-roads?"

"Must have been two," said Jones, thoughtfully. "The same man couldn't have got down there ahead of him, that's sure. Did anybody go up to Green Fancy to make inquiries?"

"'Twasn't necessary. Mr. Curtis heard the shootin' an' jest before we left he sent a man out to see what it was all about. The old skeezicks that's been drivin' his car lately come down half-dressed. He said nothin' out of the way had happened up at Green Fancy."

"It's most mysterious," said Barnes, glancing round the circle of awed faces. "There must have been some one lying in wait for these men, and with a very definite purpose in mind."

"Strikes me," said Jones, "that these two men were up to some kind of dirty work themselves, else why did they say they were goin' to Spanish Falls? They were queer actin' men, I'll have to say that."

His eyes met Barnes' and there was a queer light in them.

"You don't happen to know anything about this, do you, Mr. Barnes?" he demanded, suddenly.

SCHOOL NOTES

The Sophomore class held a party in the High School Friday with about 40 members and the Faculty present.

The evening was spent in eating and games and entertaining the Tyrone basket ball girls.

The president also gave an excellent talk proving that it is not words that count but actions.

The party broke up at a late hour and all are ready for the Soph-Senior affair.

Miss Simson, teacher of English in High School was absent Monday. Miss Powell substituted in her place.

It has been announced that the Sophomore play will be given April eleventh. The boys were working Saturday putting up scenery, etc.

The basket ball team was defeated at Reynoldsville Friday evening

Mr. Wentzel was unable to meet his manual training classes Monday, owing to sickness.

QUICK RELIEF FROM CONSTIPATION

Get Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets

That is the joyful cry of thousands since Dr. Edwards produced Olive Tablets, the substitute for calomel.

Dr. Edwards, a practicing physician for 17 years and calomel's old-time enemy, discovered the formula for Olive Tablets while treating patients for chronic constipation and torpid livers.

Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets do not contain calomel, but a healing, soothing vegetable laxative.

No griping is the "keynote" of these little sugar-coated, olive-colored tablets. They cause the bowels and liver to act normally. They never force them to unnatural action.

If you have a "dark brown mouth"—a bad breath—a dull, tired feeling—sick headache—torpid liver and are constipated, you'll find quick, sure and only pleasant results from one or two little Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets at bedtime.

Thousands take one or two every night just to keep right. Try them. 10c and 25c per box. All druggists.

NEWS OF OUR NEIGHBORS

CURWENSVILLE

The latest news from Mr. C. S. Russell, who went to Atlantic City the later part of last week for his health is that he is not improving as fast as his friends would wish. It is expected though that when he returns about May 1st his health will be fully as good as before his recent illness.

The committee of Bethesda lodge which was appointed a few weeks ago to look over the different locations for a new lodge building, have not as yet decided on anything definitely. They have three or four locations in view which would prove suitable for lodge purposes and are now figuring as to whether after the the building was erected, it would pay interest on the amount spent for erection and furnishing.

The Live Wire Sunday School class of the M E Church, of which John Haines is the instructor and teacher, went over the top last Sunday as to membership having on the roll 145 members. A picture was made of the class by A. G. Bonsall. This class had been organized and the 145 members is the fruit of a little religious work put in play by the members of the class. This is the largest class composed of men that has ever been in the Methodist school and before many months the membership roll bids fair to reach the 200 mark. Much interest is being manifested in the lessons, and men have been enrolled as members of this class who have not attended a Sabbath school for many years. It is encumbent on each member to use every effort to secure a new member.

No clue to the parties who broke into the Pennsylvania station one day last week has been obtained as yet. Entry to the room was made by breaking a window in front of the men's waiting room and also one in the ticket office Nothing was taken from the office as the thieves were unable to open the safe, and it is evident that money was what they were after as the ticket case was not molested.

And the joke was on Father Lynch. Tuesday while he was passing down Walnut street on his way home, he spied a big, fat pocket book lying on the sidewalk. Not noticing that it had a string attached to it with two young girls at the other end, he reached for the wallet, when presto, it eluded his hand and was landed at the side of those who held the end of the string. The Rev. Father had forgotten that yesterday was the first day of April.

A fire at the home of Dewey Hummel, on Bloomington avenue, Saturday evening destroyed clothing etc., to the amount of $200. His wife lit a coal oil stove in the bedroom and went down stairs, not thinking that she had turned the wick up too high. She did not return to the room for almost an hour, and when she did found the room was ablaze. Prompt action on the part of the family and some of the neighbors put the fire out without a call for the firemen. The goods were insured.

ECONOMICAL DISHES.

Milk as a food is one of the greatest importance. We are told that a quart of milk should be used daily for each member of the family before any meat is purchased. In thousands of homes where there are little children, milk, because it has increased in price, has been cut down to barely a pint per family while meat which is considered such a necessity is bought regardless of price. Milk, even at 15 cents a quart, is the cheapest protein food we can buy. Skim milk, which sells for half the price of whole milk, makes a most wholesome food and may be used in hundreds of dishes in which the whole milk was thought necessary. It is both unwise and false economy to save on milk and spend it on meat and more expensive protein products.

Dates at the present moment are not cheap and are not economical to buy often, at 50 or 60 cents a pound, but before long they may get back to the old price or near it and we will then feel that we can indulge in them with impunity.

Date Pudding.—Stone a pound of dates and lay them in a baking dish. Cover with milk and let stand an hour or two. Then bake in a slow oven, letting the dish stand in a dish of hot water. Serve either hot or cold. An egg for each cup of milk and a bit of salt and flavoring may be added, making a custard and a dish with more tourishment.

Fruit Rice Pudding.—Take three-fourths of a cup of uncooked rice, four tart apples, one-half cup of raisins, three-fourths of a cup of syrup, one-half teaspoonful of cinnamon, one-third of a teaspoonful of nutmeg, and the juice and rind of a lemon. Wash the rice, add the apples pared and quartered to the rice with three cupfuls of boiling water; add a half teaspoonful of salt and cook until the apples are done; add the remaining ingredients and cook until the rice is tender. Serve with a thin custard for sauce. Or the cooked mixture may be put into a baking dish and topped with a meringue and browned in the oven.

Nellie Maxwell

Cruelty, appearing at first as a general contempt for the rights of nations, has been turned into the chief weapon of war, and used as such by Germany without stint or limit. In the ages to come this will be remembered before everything else, and will be the last thing to be erased from the memory of mankind, writes L. P. Jacks in Atlantic. It will be the heading of the chapter in which history narrates the part which Germany has played in the war. And no one need hesitate to predict that, whatever victories she may have won, or may be destined to win hereafter, will be undone, or turned into ultimate defeats, by the reputation she has achieved as a cruel nation and as an apostle of cruelty in the life of nations.

HELPED NEIGHBORS ALONG RIGHT ROAD

Mrs. L. Rapp, 5107 Warren street, Philadelphia, whose husband is with the Philadelphia & Reading Railroad Company, believes in helping others when she can. I" was so nervous at night I couldn't sleep. Sometimes I wouldn't give two cents for my life. I couldn't eat; gas got up around my heart and the distress was most disturbing. My sister took Tanlac, and friends on Fifty-second street spoke well of it. My very first trial of Tanlac was gratifying, and I am getting better with every dose. I have so much faith in it I told a number of my neighbors in Warren street about it."

The geunine J. I. Gore Co., Tanlac is now sold here by Stewart Drug Co. and Woodward & McPherson.
